STEP 4: DECISIONS AND ACTIONS

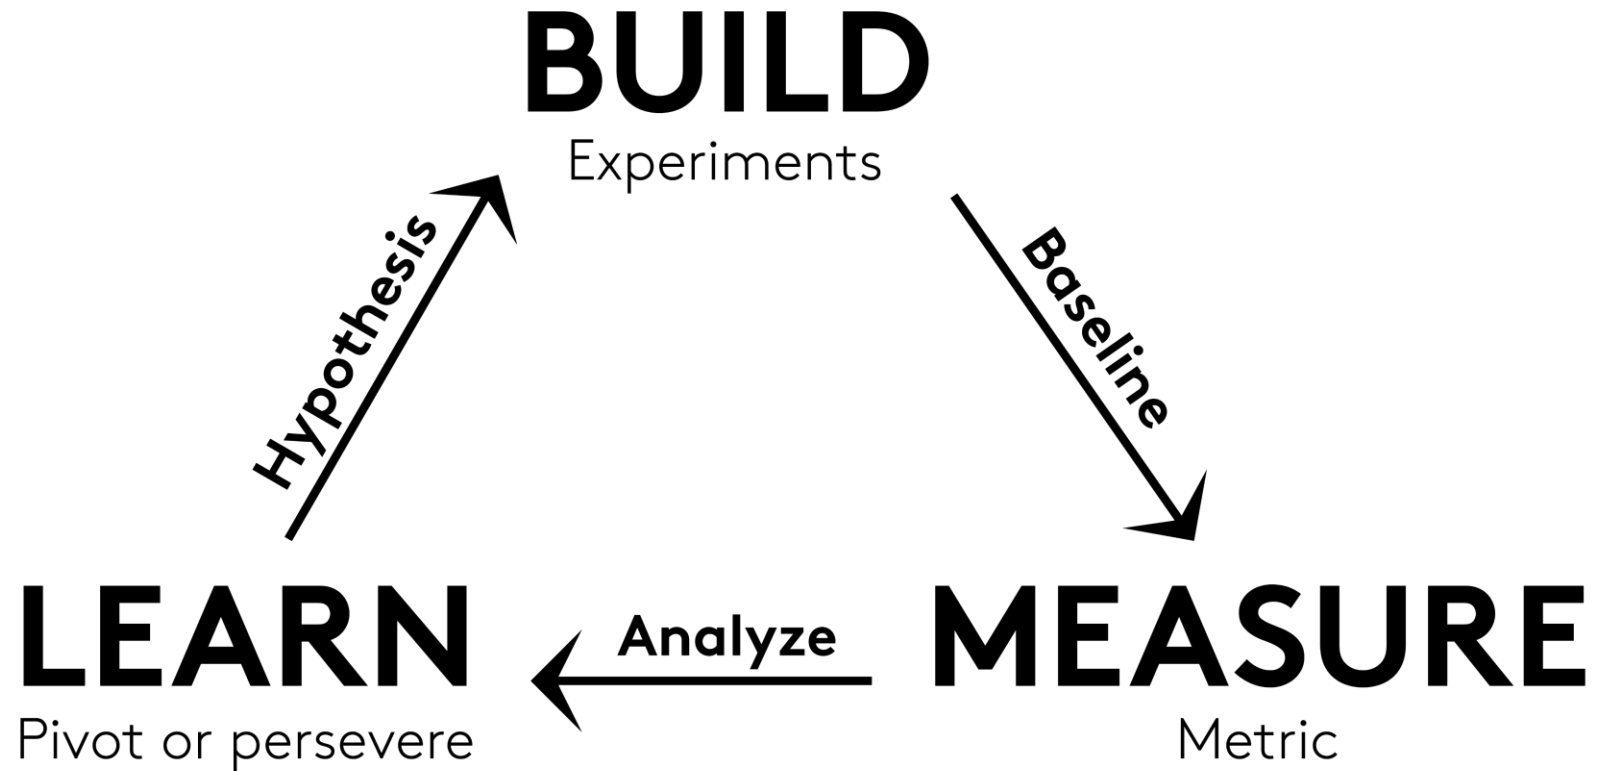

Therefore, we will

Get together in groups of 2-3 startup teams

Each startup:

1. Short presentation of your idea
2. How was your (user) test organized?
3. What did you learn from your (user) test?

The important balance

Balanced founder teams on average...

1. Raise 30% more money
2. Grow their customer base 290% more
3. Are more likely to succeed

(Startup Genome in Startup Funding, 2017)

Your teams' professional competencies

Current competencies

The diagram illustrates the current competencies of a team. It features three stylized human figures standing side-by-side, holding up a large banner. The banner is divided into two sections: 'Professional' on the left and 'Personal' on the right. The 'Professional' section is highlighted with a green border. The banner is currently empty, with lines for writing.

Personal

the team

[illegible]

1. What professional competencies do you have within your team?
2. Are you lacking any important competencies?

DISC model

See DISC model slides

What do you think about the DISC model?

What it's good for:

1. Understanding Personality Styles

Helps individuals recognize their own behavioral tendencies and those of others.

2. Improving Communication

Enhances teamwork by providing insights into how different personality types interact.

3. Conflict Resolution

Assists in understanding different perspectives, reducing misunderstandings.

4. Sales & Customer Relations

Helps salespeople adjust their approach based on customer personality types.

What it's not as good for:

1. Not getting the nuances

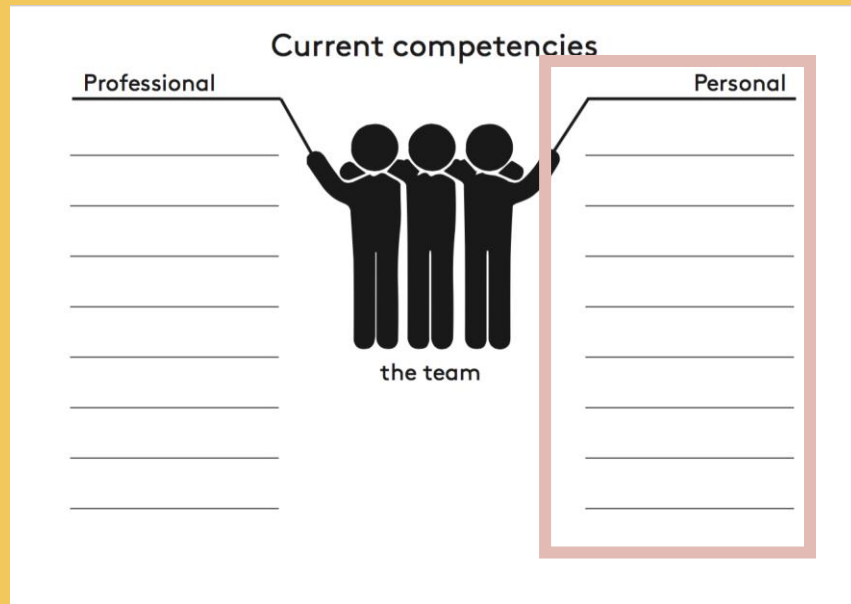

We are all complex people which isn't captured into four quadrants

Your teams' personal competencies

Professional	Personal

1. What personal competencies do you have within your team?
2. And are you lacking any important competencies?

How can you use your strengths? How can you compensate for your weaknesses?
